

After getting numerous opinions about my "heart episode" a couple of weeks ago, all my cardiologist friends have concluded the same thing...it's time to get back to work to defeat Mary Miller.

I made a decision in haste without getting all of the necessary information. When you go through something like this, emotions over rule logic and I panicked about what had happened. .

After acquiring more opinions, here's what the prognosis is... my overall heart health is fine. Blood pressure is good, so are the oxygen levels and my resting heart rate is under 60. I have a piece of blockage in a very small artery off of my heart. It was the reason for the chest pains and admission to the ER. The artery is too small to stent, so the blockage remains. It is NOT in an artery that can do any major damage. This will most likely not happen again, To quote my cardiologist, I am at a "very low risk of having a heart attack."

The most recent event was not stress related at all. As a matter of fact, this campaign has been great fun and it's enjoyable to meet new people along the trail.

After taking a couple of weeks off and watching events unfold, I am more determined than ever to take this fight for our future to every person in this district who has been abandoned by Mary Miller and her band of thieves.

The farmers, health care workers, union members (HR bill1319 is becoming more of a reality every day,) first responders and everyday people who make up this district deserve better.

I hope to be at your meetings, at our protests, and along the campaign trail talking with you and reassuring you that I'm cleared for takeoff.

Let's get back to work.
