

On Tuesday, I shared some of the voices I've been hearing from across our district. Farmers, veterans, parents, and neighbors all told me the same thing: they don't feel heard by Mary Miller.

Since that email, I've heard from even more voices across our district sharing their stories with me.

In Madison County, families told me they worry about loved ones in nursing homes if Medicaid is cut.

In Logan County, parents asked how their kids can build a future here when schools and job opportunities keep falling behind.

In Jerseyville, small business owners shared how they feel squeezed by rising costs while being ignored in Washington.

Everywhere I go, people are saying we need a representative who listens, cares, and fights for all of us.

That's exactly why I've been running since January. As a nurse, I've seen families struggle for care. As a mom, I know the worry of building a stable future for our kids. And as the daughter of a veteran, I understand the promises we owe to those who served. These are the voices I carry with me every day in this campaign.

Now I'd love to hear from you.

👉 What are you most concerned about for yourself, your family, or your community?

And if you're ready to go one step further:

- Host a coffee or meet-and-greet so neighbors can share their stories with me directly.
- Help us finish strong in the last weeks of petitioning so voters have a real choice on the ballot this year.
- Join our grassroots team so we keep building momentum, one conversation at a time.

Getting on the ballot is the next step toward true representation for all of us. With your voice and your support, we can make it happen.

Thank you for being part of this movement to bring real representation home to IL-15.
