

I was raised in a small-town Illinois family where hard work and community meant everything. My parents owned their home, just like 77% of families in IL-15 today, and they taught me that when we invest in our communities, we build stability for generations.

But too many of our neighbors are struggling to keep that promise alive. Schools and job opportunities are falling behind. Farmers face rising costs while Washington politicians look the other way.

I know what it takes to fight for working families because I've lived it, from my dad's strike to my own union work as a nurse, where we negotiated safer staffing and fair contracts. I will fight for good-paying jobs, safe workplaces, and strong schools so every family in IL-15 can put down roots and thrive.

Central Illinois deserves a representative who puts our communities ahead of party loyalty and special interests. That's the leadership I'm ready to deliver.

But before we can take this fight to Washington, we have to get on the ballot, and that starts with every single signature we collect in this petition drive. This is how we give voters across IL-15 a real choice and a real voice.

With your help in these final days, signing, gathering signatures, or encouraging neighbors to do the same, we can secure our place on the ballot and build the momentum to win for our small towns, our farms, and our families.

Together, we can protect the promise of stability for the next generation.
